Peabody's Moorvale Mine Welcomes Moranbah High School Students

Employees at Peabody's Moorvale Mine near Mackay, Queensland, recently hosted 20 grade 7 students from the Moranbah State High School. The trip allowed the students to experience life on a coal mine.

The visit was a joint initiative of Peabody, the @Queensland Resource Council, the Queensland Minerals and Energy Academy and the Queensland Government.

"Peabody is a proud supporter of the QMEA and this event gives students the opportunity to see firsthand how a mine site operates and the types of occupations and positions available," Peabody President Australia, George J. Schuller Jr. said.

"Very often students have limited understanding of the wide range of careers in the resources sector and we're hoping this event will open their eyes to the many possibilities," he added.

Moranbah State High School's Principal Andrew Wright said it was an excellent way to help bring classroom learning to life.

"Seeing the practical application of subjects like science, technology engineering and math can really make a difference to educational outcomes," Wright said.
