

#LEADERSHIP

March 18, 2019

Policymakers Tour North Antelope Rochelle Mine

Peabody President and Chief Executive Officer Glenn Kellow hosted U.S. Senator from Wyoming Mike Enzi and U.S. Secretary of Labor Alexander Acosta for a tour of the North Antelope Rochelle Mine (NARM) on Monday, March 18. Accompanying them on the tour were Vice President – Operations of NARM Scott Durgin and Senior Vice President – Global Government Affairs Michael Flannigan.

Pictured, from left: Vice President – Operations of North Antelope Rochelle Mine Scott Durgin, United States Secretary of Labor Alexander Acosta, Wyoming Senator Mike Enzi, Peabody President and Chief Executive Officer Glenn Kellow and Peabody NARM General Manager – Maintenance Operations Ken Wooley.

Secretary Acosta complimented mine employees on their outstanding safety record and pointed out the significance of domestic energy production to the country. He also noted the importance of converting products that come from the ground into value-added goods and services through the electricity it generates.

The tour of NARM made an impression on Senator Enzi.

“A picture is worth a thousand words and seeing it in person is worth a thousand pictures,” he said.

After the tour, Kellow spoke about the value of having lawmakers see the coal industry firsthand.

“Showing policymakers what we do in mining and having conversations about the importance of coal-fueled electricity to the nation is extremely important,” he said.

Peabody